NORTH CAROLINA BETA DATA

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA

CHAPEL HILL, N.C.

NOVEMBER 2004

A Message from the Chapter

President

An Outstanding Rush Yields a Diverse Group of New Pledges

It has been an incredible year thus far for the North Carolina Beta Chapter. The fall rush period ended recently with the Phi Deltas getting 23 new pledges. This brings our total number of brothers in the house to 57 for the year.

The pledge class includes two pledges from Colorado, one from Kentucky and three from Virginia. We have included a complete list of the new pledges and their hometowns in this issue. It's a diverse group of guys who I am sure will be great additions to the house for the next four years.

I would like to thank our rush chairs, Dac Cannon and Charles Hodges, for the great work and effort in putting together this pledge class. I would also like to thank all the alumni who sent us recommendations. With rush becoming shorter and shorter every year, it has become harder to identify quality rushees. We really appreciate your help.

Due to the endless contributions and work of the Beta Foundation, the house is in better shape today than it was after the renovations of 1997. Specifically, Robert Page '51 has once again been very generous with his time and effort, and does everything he can to make our chapter house look incredible. This past summer, the library received an upgrade and has become a favorite locale among the brothers for studying and relaxing. There is no doubt in my mind that the current condition of the house helped attract a strong pledge class this fall.

I would like to invite all alumni to stop by the house before football games or basketball games, or any other time you are in Chapel Hill. I have no doubt that its condition and the current brothers will impress you. I look forward to seeing all of you around the house this year.

Yours in the Bond,
Graham M. Worth '04 ■

Back of the House in Excellent Condition

By George E. Holt Jr. '58

This is another update on the facility and food management programs at the house.

This past summer, much time and effort again was put into the house by John and Jill Jenkins, our chef and housekeeper. Jill is also John's assistant for football weekends, special events and meals served during the week. She is an accomplished cook, making many buffet items from scratch. As soon as school was out this past May, they began cleaning, repairing, stripping and waxing floors, painting all the bedrooms and common areas, washing blinds in each room and ceiling light covers, and replacing wallpaper where needed in the dining room. When the brothers started moving back on August 18, the house was completely refurbished for another year. They will also do cleaning and touch-ups over the Christmas break.

The only remodeling completed this past summer was in the library/TV room. The walls were painted hunter green, a chair rail was installed and two attractive brass sconces were added. Also a new brass plaque was added at the front door entrance, that reads: "Phi Delta Theta, Established 1885."

All the outside woodwork had been painted during the summer of 2003, so only touch-ups were required on the entrance/exit doors and columns. Brass kickplates were also added to all the entrance doors and several of the doors in the common areas. This is all part of the ongoing preventive maintenance program that has been in existence for the past five-plus years.

Our food-service management program was off to another good start in August with chef John and his wife, Jill. They have already catered on four football Saturdays and were very involved in meal service during rush. They both are doing a great job, and are much appreciated by the brothers and the many alumni who have visited this fall. They have really become a strong part of the Phi Delta Theta family, and we hope they will be with us for many years to come.

Again this semester, we received a score of 100 during the fall Chapel Hill Fire Department inspection. The house will also receive $100 from the Office of Greek Affairs. Last semester, we were one of only two fraternities that received a score of 100. (The final fall inspection report for all fraternities is not available at this time.)

If you have any questions or would like more information on the food service, housekeeping or maintenance programs, please e-mail me at holtnc@earthlink.net.

Thank you.

How it

All Got Started

The Beginnings of Greek Life on the UNC Campus

Excerpts from "The Story of Student Government in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill," by Albert Coates and Gladys Hall Coates. From pages 121-22:

For years after the opening of the University in 1795, the Dialectic (Di) and Philanthropic (Phi) Societies satisfied the fraternizing spirit among the students. But their numbers grew to the point that the societies excused attendance of juniors and seniors in order to make room for new members. These students naturally sought new affiliation, and students of similar tastes began to draw together in exclusive groups known as "secret clubs" which flourished under cover.

As early as 1842, the trustees of the University came out with a resolution opposing secret and exclusive clubs as not less injurious "to the regularly established Literary Societies in the University than to the cause of good morals and sound learning," and ordered the faculty to suppress them and receive no student unless he pledged not to join them. The Di and Phi literary societies supported this trustees' action but with some misgivings. A resolution was passed after being lost at two previous meetings: "Resolved, that the Philanthropic and Dialectic Societies concur in the opinion of the Trustees that secret associations are injurious both to the regularly constituted Literary Societies and the institution, and that they will heartily cooperate with them in their endeavors to effect their suppression now and hereafter."

A committee member stated that, when the committee conferred with Governor Swain, he said that he as agent for the trustees "would be satisfied with nothing less than passage of the Resolution."

These suppressing efforts evidently succeeded for a while but by 1851 secret clubs began to reappear, and less than ten years later an article in the University Magazine, October 1860, set their total number between ten and fifteen. A few survived the Civil War and they petitioned the trustees for recognition at the reopening of the University; they were again refused. But though the doors were closed to their admission, they kept coming in at the windows, and in 1885 the faculty recommended and the trustees "granted the admission of all fraternities or Greek letter societies on condition that they provide the Faculty with the names of their members and would pledge themselves not to use intoxicating liquors at any banquet given in Chapel Hill." The trustees authorized the faculty to admit others in the future who met these conditions.

Each fraternity within limits made its own rules of fraternity house conduct. In 1912, all fraternities joined the Panhellenic Council as an advisory body with power to recommend rules of conduct. In 1919 with the adoption of a new constitution its rules became binding on all fraternities when passed by a five-sixths vote. The Interfraternity Council replaced the Panhellenic Council in 1926 and had "practically unlimited powers in regard to affairs common to fraternities." It worked in cooperation with the faculty committee on fraternities and the Student Council, exercised general control over conduct, drew up regulations as to time of initiation, time of pledging, scholastic standards, rushing procedure, etc., and acted as a clearinghouse for all problems relating to fraternities.
